Carter proposes $1.2 billion to aid middle-income students

By Carol J. Frahm
Editor

Another 15 to 20 per cent of Clarke's students may receive financial aid, if a plan President Jimmy Carter proposed last Wednesday is accepted by Congress, according to Sister Michael Geary, director of financial aid.

Carter's plan, aimed at helping middle income families, would add $1.2 billion dollars to federal student assistance for 1979. His plan includes more grants, loans and part-time jobs.

Grants of $250-$1800 would be available to students of families with an income of $15,000-$25,000. Loans would be available to students whose family income ranges up to $45,000.

Carter's plan is an alternative to a $250 tax credit proposed by William Roth, a Delaware representative. The Senate has approved the tax credit three times, however the House has yet to vote on it. The tax credit would be given to all families and would increase to $500 in four years.

Carter's plan is designed to help middle income families currently excluded from aid programs. Carter estimated 2 million students would be eligible under the new program, making a total of 5 million students eligible for 1979.

Carter cited statistics which show a 77 per cent increase in college costs in the last decade.

Geary who favors Carter's plan said, "Middle income families are the hardest hit. They do not qualify for the aid that is available, yet they do not have the resources to cover college costs themselves."

Geary called the plan a "good substitute" for the tax cut.

Under Carter's plan, the federally subsidized work-study program would be expanded.

Geary said she would be happy if the work-study funding were increased. She also hoped more students would become eligible for jobs.

The grants Carter proposes would be administered under the present Basic Educational Opportunity Grant program. The plan would add $1 billion, making the total BEOG program $2.16 billion for next year.

Geary said she thought Carter opposed the tax credit because "it would not be sufficient aid to help those who need it."

Currently 60 per cent of all Clarke students are on financial aid. Financial aid grants to students range from $200-$3800. The average is $1800. All tolled about $800,000 in aid will be awarded to students this year, according to Geary.

Carter said he would not accept both programs. Carter's plan is subject to House and Senate approval.

Federal assistance to students would total $5.2 billion for 1979 with the $1.2 billion addition.

AAC recommends econ, accounting be retained as individual majors

by Anne Ely
Staff Writer

The Academic Affairs Committee (AAC) voted unanimously to retain economics and accounting as individual majors at its meeting Feb. 6. The vote followed recommendations from an ad hoc committee assigned to study the status of the two programs.

Economics, as suggested by the sub-committee, will remain largely a tri-college program. Accounting majors can expect to have most of their classes at Clarke, since the sub-committee report shows that accounting is more in demand as a major than economics. Committee chairperson Bob

Evanson said of accounting, "It is one of those rare fields in which demand exceeds supply."

The ad hoc committee, composed of Evanson, Peg Snedrud, Pat Folk, Rene Manning and Deb Jasper, also recommended that the two programs fall under the administration of the department of management and computer sciences, should that department be finalized. AAC voted to pass that decision on to President Meneve Dunham and Sister Sheila O'Brien, academic dean.

Recommendations were made by AAC members and ad hoc committee members that advising students in accounting and economics be kept separate from the department administration. This would permit students to have advisors in their individual major, even if the department head is not part of that major program.

Supportive comments for the retention of the two majors centered

Feb. 19 at 1:30 p.m. and Feb. 21 at 4:30 p.m. Students and faculty will introduce Stafford's poetry and his theories about writing poetry, as well as share in the reading of some of his work. Persons who would like to read his poetry are asked to contact Barb Ressler or Sister Jane McDonnell.

This year Stafford, a professor of English at Lewis and Clark College in Portland, Oregon, will make Clarke his first stop on his annual winter lecture tour. He has recently published his seventh book of poems, Stories That Could Be True.

Originally from Kansas, Stafford received his B.A. and M.A. degrees at the University of Kansas and his doctorate at the University of Iowa. From his midwest background, Stafford writes about nature in the mid- and northwestern states.

Stafford's other poetry collections are, Someday, Maybe, Going Places, Allegiances, The Rescued Year, and West of Your City.

Paul Salamunovich, a well known conductor from North Hollywood, was guest conductor at the 7th Annual Choral Festival sponsored by the Music Department Feb. 24. Some 300 students from 31 high schools in the tri-state area participated.

Shuttle bus overloaded

Some students have been without transportation between campuses because of the 17 passenger limit imposed on the tri-college shuttle bus.

Jill Schroeder, shuttle bus driver, imposed the limit because she could be ticketed for allowing more riders than the capacity of the bus. She consulted Loras College Business Manager Virgil Blocker before limiting the bus to 17 Feb. 2.

According to Schroeder she has had as many as 30. Capacity of the bus is 15 including the driver. Schroeder felt 17 could be carried on the bus comfortably.

Schroeder has been leaving when there are 17 passengers. She has left as many as four students behind in one run. Because she leaves when the bus is full Schroeder said she may be leaving others behind which she does not know about.

Clarke students Shelley Vician and Bev Schroeder, who have a class at Loras, wrote a letter to President Meneve Dunham and Sister Sheila O'Brien, Clarke's representatives on the tri-college executive committee.

O'Brien, who said she knew of no other problem except that of Vician and Schroeder, said temporary provisions for transportation would be made until the tri-college committee could discuss the problem. The committee meets tomorrow.

O'Brien said that temporarily college cars would be used to transport students.

According to O'Brien in the past the problem of overloading has resolved itself.

The bus driver is an employee of Loras College, although Clarke, Loras, and UD share the cost of the bus. The bus makes two trips to each campus every hour.

Show honors bad taste in mass produced art

(CCSNS) — The Kitsch Art Show, "A Homage to Bad Taste in Art," will be displayed from February 6-24 in the Solarium.

Kitsch art is high art brought low for consumption," Sister Carmelle Zerdin said. "It is art that loses its meaning through being mass produced for mass culture."

The show will focus on the misrepresentation and commercialization of fine art. It will feature an indefinite number of works derived from masterpieces since Kitsch artists are abusers of the real interpretation of a masterpiece, according to Sister Carmelle. She described these works as being changed from the original through scale, size, color, background, and environmental influence, to suit sentimental needs of our modern day culture." Some of the works to be presented are 12 misinterpretations of the "Last Supper." There will be a copper relief version, a version of the Last Supper on a candy bar, one paint-by-number version, another version where the figures are rearranged and another showing the apostles shaved. The show will also feature abused versions of Burer's "Praying Hands," in the form of bookends, earrings and a decoupage plaque.

A Kitsch reception was held Monday, February 6. The public was invited to come dressed in bad taste.

The art show was developed by the art department for the popular culture series the cultural events committee is sponsoring.

Student forum planned

An opening student meeting to discuss student representation on the Board of Trustees, payment of stipends to student officers, and collection of Clarke Student Association dues will be scheduled early next weekend.

The decision to have the meeting was made by the Executive Council at their meeting Feb. 1. All three topics have previously been discussed by the Council.

Executive Council tabled approval of the on-campus life budget until its next meeting. The board did approve expenditures of $1358.92 for social board, off-campus life, Phoenix and RAP. Social Board received $975 for second semester, $120 for off-campus life, $221 for Phoenix and $42 for RAP.

Approval of the on-campus life budget was postponed because no activities were scheduled for residents of Mary Benedict Hall. Said Sister Therese Mackin, ex-officio member of Executive Council, "I believe you should table the budget in a last effort to schedule some event; I don't think the residents of Mary Ben should be deprived of the opportunity to share in CSA funds because of the lack of communication of those in charge."

Executive Council also received a report on the dance marathon for Cerebral Palsy scheduled for March 10-11.

Invitations mailed for parents' weekend

Invitations for Parent's Weekend, Feb. 25-26, were mailed to all student's parents last Monday. Reservations are due Feb. 21.

The schedule for the annual event includes a 1 p.m. welcome by Dr. Meneve Dunham; following it parents will be able to meet with faculty members. At 3 p.m. slides of the Clarke-Loras Singers' tour to India will be shown. From 9-12 p.m. there will be a party in Mary Jo Dining Room.

Two liturgies, one at 5 p.m. Saturday and the other 10:45 p.m. on Sunday will be offered.

Following brunch on Sunday parents will have the chance to meet with Dr. Dunham. A piano recital at 2 p.m. by Senior Meg Koller will conclude the activities.

Co-chairpersons of Parent's Weekend Committee are Kathy O'Flaherty and Karen Volz. Committee members are Lisa McCarthy, Sheila Doyle, Paula Puls, Sally Feehan, Margaret Doyle, Ann Houghton, Lisa Teel, Sister Carolanne Miles, Sister Therese Mackin, and Sister Bertha Fox.

Students are invited to take part in the weekend whether or not their parents attend. Volunteers will be needed to help with preparations and clean up for the Saturday party.

No Courier Next Monday

Courier will not publish next week because of the Tri-College free day. The next issue will be Feb. 27.

Food writing spices Holmberg's life

When Rita Holmberg writes, she likes to think as if she's chatting with her readers. The part-time Foods/Nutrition instructor doesn't believe in talking at them either. When she writes her recipes and food-related articles, Holmberg stresses clarity and accuracy.

"You can't assume any level of knowledge or degree of sophistication," according to the Dubuque resident. "You have to make it very understandable."

It is important to be sure the copy is "foolproof." "When you have 25 million readers and you make a mistake," Holmberg said, "you don't make one mistake — you make 25 million."

Holmberg's interest in writing has influenced her life, since her graduation from Clarke in the 1940's. She taught in the nursing program at Johns Hopkins University for a year before going to work for Armour Meat Company in Chicago. There she was responsible for all editorial material. Holmberg stayed with Armour during the early 1960's when she joined an advertising agency, McCann-Erickson, writing copy for products such as Peter Pan peanut butter.

That job led directly to the position of food editor of Better Homes and Gardens. Her post required her to be tuned in to what was going on ahead of time, since she had to plan her articles a year in advance.

Before returning to Dubuque in 1975 to care for her father, Holmberg worked as director of home economics for a flour mill company, Peavey Company, in Minnesota.

in culture

Paula saw the Rock of Gibraltar only because she and her companions stayed on the wrong train on their way to Sevilla. Not realizing it was too late the girls were forced to spend the night in Algeciras, which Paula calls a dirty town with nothing but three hotels. During one break Paula flew to the island of Mallorca off the Spanish coast in the Mediterranean Sea. Said Paula, "The Spanish people are slow, but they don't talk slow. They don't have that mad pace that Americans tend to have."

Paula was forced to speak the language not only to make herself understood, but also because she was under contract to do so. All students in the St. Louis campus sign a contract binding them to speak Spanish while they are there. If they violate it, they are sent home. Paula said to one who was sent home, but a few students were fined.

Said Paula, "When Father Sullivan (director of the school) wasn't around you didn't necessarily have to speak Spanish."

Once during the semester Paula got to call home free. Paula heard about a phone booth, which allowed callers to dial anywhere without charge. Paula had to travel across town and wait several hours in line, but she got to talk with her Mother.

When Paula first got to Spain she had trouble with the phones because almost everyone was different: she would learn to operate one and the next one would work differently.

Said Paula of those early days, "You had to get up enough courage to say 'I'm going to go out.' I'm going to learn how."

If you ask Paula what she misses, she will tell you "everything." She said she can't separate one thing from the whole.

Paula's was candid when she said, "I would go back tomorrow on the next plane."

Phoenix hunger dinner yields student concern

(CCSNS) — "I felt a little conspicuous but I was glad I had steak instead of rice," Maxine Kollasch said of the Hunger Roulette Banquet held by Phoenix last Monday evening. The banquet was intended to make people aware that one third of the world's population is underfed.

Out of the 63 who signed up, 48 persons attended. The 18 who picked up the tickets marked 'H' were served a lavish meal of steak, shrimp, corn, french fries, salad and dessert with regular silver and china plates. The remaining 30 had rice with vegetable sauce served on paper plates with plastic forks.

People got different kinds of meals not because some of them deserved any better, but simply because they were lucky. It is equally arbitrary and unfair, said Kollasch, that some nations in the world have it so much better than others.

"I was glad I got the rice because if I had the steak I would have felt guilty," said Paula Koellner. Kathy Wodmeyer, who also drew the rice card, commented that real life

Now, besides her classes, she works as consultant for a Des Moines food company and a local advertising agency. She freelances also.

She has published in "Women's Day," "Family Circle," "Modern Maturity," and most recently in the November issue of "Bon Appetit". In September her first cookbook, "Great Dishes from the Oven," was released.

According to Holmberg, in order to sell something it has to be a valid idea with "freshness" and a "twist".

The idea behind her cookbook, published in cooperation with "Farm Journal" magazine, is to use the oven, which consumes so much energy, wisely.

The idea grew from personal experience with her sister in Connecticut. Her sister was constantly using the oven for something now and then, instead of maximizing its use.

The cookbook, which features Holmberg's own recipes, suggests doing all your baking when the oven's being used for one or two dishes and freezing it until needed. There are also ideas on how to cook entire meals in the oven.

Holmberg enjoys teaching. She finds it rewarding to see the development of the students as they tie their knowledge together.

There have been advances in the food industry since her own days as a student. These advances correlate with trends in society. Holmberg has seen frozen vegetables and orange juice concentrate come on the market, as well as a variety of convenience foods, including cake mixes and frozen prepared entrees. Likewise she has seen new appreciation of nutrition and its importance. Snack food has appeared. Although she's not sure whether the advances causes the trends in society or vice versa, she thinks there is a correlation between those developments and working mothers, the increased amount of leisure and the advent of television.

Food and writing aren't Holmberg's sole interest. While she was in Minnesota, Holmberg did a radio show for the blind, "Talking Book Radio". She also had her own hour show on family health.

In her leisure hours Holmberg enjoys sewing, golfing, cross-country skiing and hiking.

According to Holmberg, there are three qualifications that make a foodwriter.

She says, "You have to be very interested in food; you have to enjoy good food, but most of all you have to have the scientific background."

Rita Holmberg meets all three.

Pre-arranged weddings still exist

In Italy, tradition states, some unmarried women get up before sunrise to stand by their windows. Supposedly, the first man a girl sees will become her husband within a year.

In Denmark, if a young woman guesses the name of her secret courier, she is rewarded with an Easter egg on the following Easter.

At Clarke, the traditional celebration of St. Valentine's Day will be repeated tomorrow night, beginning with a Junior Senior cocktail party in Mary Frances Activity room. The party, from 4:30 to 5:30, is given in honor of all the Senior girls who are engaged or married. Each honored girl receives a flower, and is introduced after the Valentine's dinner in the cafeteria. Skits will be presented by members of the Senior class.

This year, especially, the Valentine's Day celebration provides Clarke students with an opportunity to vicariously experience the courtship and marriage customs in other countries.

Junior Peg Klein returned this year from summer studies in Africa, where the courtship and marriage customs differ greatly from those in the United States. "Many of the marriages there are pre-arranged," said Peg. "The weddings themselves are quite large. Anyone a bride or groom has ever met is invited to the wedding. An announcement is put in the paper, and everyone just comes. If a person even knows a relative of the couple, he or she is invited."

Anne Peryon, a Senior from Guam, stated that most marriages are becoming modernized. "Most middle-aged people had pre-arranged marriages. Today, the man asks the girl's father as a formality. The bride showers there are big fiestas — with a band and lots of food. It depends on the family, but some dating couples must be chaperoned by a little brother or sister." The traditional bachelor party takes place the night before the wedding, and is similar to a reception, with everyone attending. "The groom's party has a cake just like the wedding cake, but it is made especially for the groom," Anne said.

Nazli Saifullah, a foreign student from Pakistan, stated that almost all of the weddings in her country are pre-arranged.

"There are two ways a couple becomes engaged in my country. We have matchmakers, who go from home to home and collect pictures of both boys and girls who wish to get married. Each set of parents have certain requirements that must be met, and the boy or girl must come from a background similar to the family they are marrying into.

They must be the same, economically as well as culturally. Pakistan is very class-conscious, although we do not have a caste system. If the parents agree on the person the matchmaker has found, then a meeting is arranged. There is a formal proposal by the boy's father to the girl's father, and the girl's parents take several days to think it over. If it appears to be a good match, the girl's father interviews the boy." Nazli stated that during the traditional engagement, and until the marriage, the couple is not to see one another. "The girl observes purdah, which means that she keeps her face covered with a veil during the engagement party. She keeps her face veiled when people come to see her that day, and she must not speak to any visitors."

The other way people may become engaged is socially, through the parents' friends. "The parents already know the other family socially, and know their backgrounds. The proposal still must be a formal one," said Nazli.

The main wedding ceremony in Pakistan lasts three days. The bride's father presents a dowry for her marriage. The celebrations begin one week to a month before the wedding. Nazli's engagement was arranged socially, through her parents.

Tuesday night's festivities will give Nazli and the other girls the chance to exchange their stories on engagements and their upcoming marriages.

Player of the Week

Freshman Sherri Hyde has been named player of the week after her outstanding performance against Highland Community College last Monday. In that game she scored 13 points and made 7 steals. Her season totals stand at 101 points, 40 steals and 45 rebounds.

Crusaders defeated twice record drops to 3-11

The Crusaders' poor shooting and offensive rebounding helped Highland Community College down Clarke 70-47 last Monday night.

With starters Peg Smith, Annette Reiter, Anna Kopke, and Sherri Hyde each scoring a basket, Clarke jumped out to an 8-0 lead, holding Highland scoreless until the 16:42 mark. In the next seven minutes Highland scored 14 unanswered points and pulled ahead to stay 14-8. The Freeport, IL school stretched their lead to 15 points, 29-18 at the half.

The Crusaders never came any closer than 13 points, 31-18, in the second half. Clarke never threatened in the second stanza as Highland opened their lead.

Fouls plagued both teams in the second half. A total of 15 fouls were whistled in the first half compared with 33 in the second. For Clarke Cindy Schnier, Hyde and Kopke fouled out. Highland's leading scorer Deb Scott annexed five personals. Reiter and two Highland players each had four.

Both teams shot 50 per cent from the freethrow line, although Clarke had no attempts in the first stanza.

Highland outrebounded Clarke 40-27. Clarke had only one offensive rebound in the first half and four in the second half.

Deb Scott of Highland lead all scorers with 23. Clarke's Annette Reiter tallied 20; Sherri Hyde chipped in 13. Paula Miller and Terry Korth added 16 and 15 respectively for Highland.

From the floor Clarke shot 25.7 per cent while Highland connected on 40.4 per cent of their shots.

The Crusaders record dropped to 3-11. They take on Loras tonight.

Marycrest downs Crusaders 71-40

A weak offense caused the Crusaders to be defeated 71-40 by Marycrest, Saturday, February 4 at Davenport's Palmer Auditorium.

The accurate shooting and speed of the Marycrest team added to the cause of Crusader defeat. Everything the Crusaders tried fell through. Annette Reiter was the high scorer for the Crusaders with 18 points.

Fund drive collects $58,000

The Annual Clarke Thrust (ACT) drive has collected over $58,000 to date. Sister Carolanne Miles, assistant director of development, feels that the goal of $60,000 will be reached by the end of the drive on May 31.

The ACT drive is put on each year by the Clarke Development Council. William Kruse, chairman of the First National Bank, is chairman of the 1977-78 drive.

Sister Carolanne is pleased with the drive and feels that its success can be partially attributed to Kruse's leadership.

The drive has three luncheon meetings throughout the year, one in the fall, one in the winter and one in the spring. The winter meeting is scheduled for March 2.

The drive gets contributions from Dubuque businesses. In the past ten years over a half of a million dollars has been collected.

RAP gets six new members

Six persons joined Reach Another Person (RAP) at the sign-up held last week to give a chance to persons who had not signed up the first semester.

"The results of the sign-up were due to a lack of publication," said Teresa Mori, who is nevertheless pleased with the outcome.

RAP connects student volunteers with social service agencies in the Dubuque area. Among the several RAP concerns are: giving time to the elderly; Saint Vincent de Paul and Project Concern; the Buddy Club; babysitting for Vietnamese families.

Peg Smith passes the ball off as she drives up court in the Highland game last Monday. The game was the second for Smith this semester, since recovering from surgery.

SPORT BRIGHTS Sports related magazines needed in Clarke library

The Clarke library has 540 magazines, only two-three dozen are popular magazines and none are related to sports.

According to Sister Kathleen Mullen, head librarian, periodicals are purchased based on recommendations and requests made by faculty and staff members. She said one of the reasons there are no sports related magazines is that there has not been, in recent years, a physical education program or emphasis on this campus.

The reasoning behind so many department related magazines is that Clarke's library is of an academic nature. For a person to get the full benefits of an academic library there should also be periodicals available for general knowledge and leisure reading. Included in general knowledge and leisure material would be those that are sports related. A large part of the social life of today's society focuses on or around sporting activities. Sport related events also parallel the concern for physical fitness in society.

The opportunity to read an occasional sports related article adds to a person's knowledge of current events as well as personal knowledge.
